Evidence which the detectives regarded as conclusive was secured against eighteen of them and warrants were at once issued by Justice Koch. Sixteen arrests were made simultaneously last evening. In the house of Mrs. Elizabeth Schroeder, known better as "Schroeder Home," at 318 East Fifty-sixth street, Detectives Hurd and Waite, who made he arrest, discovered the dead bodies of two infants crowded into the corner of a closet under a sink. Both were of premature birth.

There were eighteen warrants issued and sixteen arrests made. The two absent ones probably received a "tip." Mrs. Schroeder, in whose house the two dead infants were found, told an "Evening World" reporter, that the bodies were awaiting removal to the Morgue when the officers called. One had been born the day before, and the mother had been attended by four well-known physicians, who would testify at the proper time. She declined to give their names. The other child, she sald, had been born yesterday morning.
